Abstract

A self-adjoint sugama style collision operator and a nonlinear landau boltzmann collision operator has been implemented within GENE. The accuracy of both operators have been verified by analyzing particle, momentum, and energy conservation properties, as well as temperature and flow relaxation properties. Such operators are planned to be used for gyrokinetic edge simulations and neoclassical simulations, and their results compared.